EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

As challenges from the COVID-19 (Coronavirus) pandemic deepened, area funders, capacity builders, businesses, and government entities wanted to understand the current reality of Central Florida nonprofits so that they can better support and advocate for the sector.

The Edyth Bush Institute for Philanthropy & Nonprofit Leadership conducted the Unified Community Assessment for Central Florida Nonprofits from April 6, 2020 to April 15, 2020.

Key Takeaways:

- 295 organizations responded to the survey in the 7-county area.
- Of the nonprofits that responded, organizations expect a $48M - $54M impact from February 2020 - June 2020.
- 70% of respondents indicated cancellation of fundraising events, 66% indicated reduced individual donations, and 59% indicated reduced earned revenue/fee for service.
- 68% of respondents indicated they have up to 6 months of operating capacity; 32% state they have 2 months or less.
- Top five operational impact as a result of the pandemic included the following:
 - Cancellation of programmatic/mission-related (not primarily fundraising) events
 - Disruption of services to clients or communities
 - Challenges related to staff and volunteers needing to work remotely
 - Increased demand for services or support from clients and communities
 - Disruption of supplies or services from partners
- Major concerns of the clients that nonprofits serve included service continuation, health and safety, mental health and technology.
- Nonprofits indicated a need for flexible and unrestricted financial assistance, technology assistance, and marketing assistance to promote the changes in organization's delivery on their mission.
- Respondents who offered resources or advice to other nonprofits shared the following:
 - Develop brand/organization promotion statements of the impact of its mission to the community
 - Promote the need for financial assistance and diversity revenue
 - Collaboration

The surveys were designed for 501(c)(3) nonprofit organizations in the following seven county areas: Brevard, Lake, Orange, Osceola, Polk, Seminole, and Volusia counties. To avoid duplication of responses, this survey was to be completed by the current leader (e.g. Executive Director/CEO, board chair) of the organization. The surveys were distributed electronically through email, social media, website postings, and word of mouth.

Please note: the questions in the survey were optional, including contact information. Given that all items were optional, the number of responses analyzed for each item varies.

The survey was developed in collaboration with the Donors Forum of Central Florida.

Challenges to existing HR policies	79	26.78%
Instituted hiring freeze	66	22.37%
Adjusted wages and benefits	50	16.95%
Other	27	9.15%

5. Please check all that apply (if any) to the services your organization currently provides:

There was a total of 295 responses for this question.

Services	Count	Percentage (n=295)
My organization provides a service that directly supports the health or basic needs of those affected by the COVID-19 pandemic.	93	31.53%
My organization provides a service that mitigates the spread of COVID-19.	26	8.81%
My organization has changed its operations or services so that it can more directly provide support those involved in the COVID-19 response.	85	28.81%

6. What are the major concerns of your clients (customers) since the COVID-19 challenge began?

There was a total of 240 responses for this question.

Concern Category	Percentage (n=240)
Service continuation	35.83%
Healthy/safety	27.08%
Mental health	19.17%
Trapped environment	17.08%
Technology	15.83%
Cancelled programming	14.58%
Loss of job	12.08%
Financial constraints	6.25%
Legal needs	5.42%
Basic needs	1.67%
Working from home transition	1.67%
Remote education for children	1.25%

General notes:

- Responses referencing service continuation referred to providing resources and services to clients (including food, transportation, elderly care, specialty services to individuals with disabilities), providing arts to the community, providing services virtually effectively, and offering services to pets.
- Health and safety responses referred to the public health as well as the need for health items (PPE) to ensure continued services.
- Mental health included concerns about anxiety/fear, isolation, and loneliness.
- Technology referred to technology for clients and providing services using technology.

When will their families be able to come back and participate in our programs?

The stress on caregivers of kids with disabilities is overwhelming. Caregivers are suddenly thrust into being at home 24/7 with little or no support and no opportunity to get a mental or physical break. This is compounded with the need for financial resources.

For the parents it is employment, housing, food, having children home 24 hours a day. For the kids it is a new way to learn.

RESOURCE IMPACT OF COVID-19 TO CENTRAL FLORIDA NONPROFITS

7. As a result of the COVID-19 pandemic, what financial ramifications has your organization experienced to date? Please check all that apply.

22. What resources could local funders, capacity builders, businesses, and government entities provide that would help your nonprofit respond to challenges created by the COVID-19 pandemic?

There was a total of 242 responses for this question.

Financial assistance	75%
Technology assistance	12%
Program donations	11%
PPE	9%
Training	5%
Marketing assistance	4%
Volunteers	4%

General notes:

- Responses referencing financial assistance predominately referenced desire for unrestricted funds. Second to this preference, was a reference to current grant funding. Many responses described a need to have current grant deliverable expectations to be modified in some way. The third trend within the financial assistance category was found to be related to funding for basic needs, such as housing, food, clothing. Though not a significant number, some responses in this category referenced the need for financial support to bring additional staff members on board.
- All technology related responses referenced either device needs, Wi-Fi expansion, or general technology consultation to support organizations moving to virtual delivery.
- Marketing related responses mentioned the need for social media related consultation and general marketing needs to help promote changes in organizations' delivery on their mission.
- Responses on program donations referenced the need for items related to their typical mission work. Since these are not coming from the community at large as in the past, it has created a need.
- Training and consultation responses referenced the need for crisis management support and conversion to an alternative delivery system for their mission work.

What resources could local funders, capacity builders, businesses, and government entities provide that would help your nonprofit respond to challenges created by the COVID-19 pandemic? (continued)

Right now, more than anything we need: 1. Financial resources to weather this crisis, 2. Technological resources to enable virtual work and service provision, and 3. Technical assistance to help conceptualize a way forward regarding new, more virtual, service delivery models.

Unrestricted operating support is the most helpful but also willingness to release restrictions or understand that not all deliverables can be met. Most importantly, to continue their usual support regardless of if the organization is up and running at full tilt. Nonfinancial support, if a business or community leader provided their finance experts to nonprofits for webinars, zoom meetings, etc. so that the organizations with fewer resources can learn from experienced, quality finance leaders.

Loosening of grant restrictions to keep staff employed. Longer timeframes for restricted grants. General operating support so we can use this time to create better backend operations. Share your knowledge- the webinars are helpful during this time to allow us all to connect virtually and share ideas and challenges. Help us be productive during this time so we don't spend it being anxious. We need to project confidence to our staff, donors, constituents and board. But we struggle too.

23. Is there anything else you want funders, capacity builders, businesses, and government to know in this unprecedented time?

There was a total of 204 responses for this question.

- 11 responses were specific in the need to support the arts/cultural organizations.
- 9 responses were specific in the need to support mental health initiatives.
- 15 responses were specific in the need to support youth in the future.

General notes:

- Much of the responses in this section were related to brand/organization promotion-statements of their impact on the community.
- Due to the nature of the responses, it was more difficult to categorize the data. However, the following trends were identified: Responses centered mostly on brand advocacy and messages about continuation of mission, the need for financial help, and messages of appreciation and community pride.
- For those that advocated for their missions, those most often noted were in the area of mental health, youth programs/education, arts/culture, and those experiencing inequity of effect (low income, etc.).

First, I want them to know that they are more appreciated now more than ever. It is times like this that define us as a community and the decisions they make are a strong indicator of the type of region we are committed to being....

This is the right time for funders to come together and fund a "system response" rather than providing funds to individual organizations who are working in silos.

I know that no one wants to hear that we need financial help just to stay afloat but that is the truth. I have done everything I know including applying for loans. How deep can we go and not have it be too deep to ever get back? As a medium size nonprofit our margin is never large. But, we thought we were in a very secure position. It's not like we lost a center to a fire or we had to close for a week in the aftermath of a hurricane. That we could manage, without help. This is a hurricane that sits over us, not moving, and we don't know when it will end. When it does, the need will still be here, but will we?

24. What resources or advice can you recommend to other nonprofits to help them adapt in the next 60 days?

There was a total of 195 responses for this question.

- 147 out of 195 responses (75%) were financial and business continuity recommendations.
- 8% were recommendations to collaborate with a partner.
- 10% were recommendations that were attitudinal in nature- encouragement and support.

General notes:

- Much of the responses in this section were related to brand/organization promotion-statements of their impact on the community.
- Due to the nature of the responses, it was more difficult to categorize the data. However, the following trends were identified: Responses centered mostly on brand advocacy and messages about continuation of mission, the need for financial help, and messages of appreciation and community pride.
- For those that advocated for their missions, those most often noted were in the area of mental health, youth programs/education, arts/culture, and those experiencing inequity of effect (low income, etc.).

First, learn from this experience. Diversify revenue sources, focus on new and innovative ways to promote and enhance their mission, prepare ahead of time for challenges of this scale, overcommunicate with staff, board, and all other stake holders, and rely on the expertise of your board of directors. Pursue all aspects of mission, preparation, innovation, growth, impact, and problem solving with as little ego as possible. Collaborate, gladly receive fair critical feedback, remain optimistic and realistic, and see to serve (not just receive help). Reinvigorate annual funds, get it profitable, and build 3-6 month cash reserves. Hire smart, give real time feedback, LISTEN (to staff and all stakeholders), get right people in the right seats, and act quickly when a poorly fit employee is identified.

Don't be discouraged. Let necessity be the mother of invention. Think out of the box.

Think safety and survival first. Sustain your mission/programs and reinvent second. Collaborate, collaborate, collaborate.

Your leadership and employee teams are the vital link to success in this environment. Listen and learn. A new normal is coming.

25. Do you have anything you could offer to assist other nonprofits?

There was a total of 151 responses for this question.

General notes:

- Responses included assistance for other nonprofits in the following areas: expertise (IT, executive, legal, finance), cross-referrals, volunteers, funds for students, rental subsidies, computers, durable medical equipment, peer support, tutors, emergency planning, building remodel consultation, and media airtime.

26. When it comes to communities you serve or that your organization is a part of, what types of institutions or groups are you seeing that are playing a key role in supporting your communities in response to COVID-19?

There was a total of 151 responses for this question.

Responses included the following entities:

- Government (local and state)
- United Way
- First responders & hospital systems
- School districts
- Health departments
- Chambers of commerce
- Associations
- Social media
- Banks
- Nonprofits
- Foundations/funders
- Faith-based institutions
- Media
- Board members, community supporters
- Private businesses
- Colleges

27. Do you need anything else or wish to communicate anything else?

There was a total of 138 responses to this question.

- 43% of the responses were of gratitude.
- 14% of the responses reflected needs to find additional sources of funding.
- Others were advice and/or needs around business continuity, need for additional supplies, innovation, collaboration/idea sharing, volunteerism, safety precautions, and concerns for small nonprofits.

We are grateful for the support of our community partners and are encouraged by their interest in our needs

Organizations must realize the importance of growing reserves and endowments

Be safe and uplift others.

The small nonprofits will be the hardest hit. Our communities really need our services and I hope that we are not forgotten.
